

Growing animals

Some young animals look like their parents, but many look very different.

All animals have young. We call our young people babies. Babies look much like grown-ups, but smaller.

Many young animals look like smaller grown-ups, too. Here is a baby cat. It is called a kitten. A baby dog is called a puppy and looks like a grown-up dog.

Kittens look like small cats.

Puppies look like grown-up dogs.

Some young animals do not look like the grown-ups. They live very different lives. A tadpole is a young frog. It begins life as an egg. When it hatches it looks like a black fish with a large head and a tail. It stays in the water and breathes like a fish.

As it grows up it gets legs. It loses its tail and then looks like a little frog. It now breathes air and lives out of the water.

What other animals have young which look like small adults?